

THE JOHN MARSHALL LAW SCHOOL

CENTER FOR INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY AND PRIVACY LAW

Presents a lecture by

Robert O'Harrow Jr.

Author of

No Place to Hide

5:00 p.m.

Thursday, April 7, 2005

The John Marshall Law School

Room 1200

315 South Plymouth Court, Chicago

In No Place to Hide, O'Harrow, an award winning Washington Post reporter, examines how the government is collecting information on all our movements and actions under the justification of national security. O'Harrow will outline how computers are allowing businesses and the government to monitor us with few regulations, and how this national intelligence infrastructure will impact our traditional beliefs of civil liberties, autonomy and privacy.

This is a free program. To RSVP, contact The Center for Information Technology and Privacy Law at 6penczak@jmls.edu or 312.987.1419.

THE
JOHN MARSHALL LAW SCHOOL

315 S. Plymouth Court, Chicago, Illinois 60604

www.jmls.edu/information.html